

I am against allowing the use of cellular telephones on commercial aircraft. Being confined in a narrow tube with DOZENS of people yacking away, yelling over each other, for hours at a time, would be absolutely unbearable. I believe this would constitute a threat to safety due to the inevitable interpersonal conflicts arising on board as people try to sleep, or just sit in peace, and are thwarted by a barrage of one-sided blabber. Please don't make courteous passengers long for the good old days when silence was pierced on occasion by a screaming infant.
